4. Work session: Regional Programs Budget

- Committee members discussed the structure and management of Burlington's regional programs budget, with particular attention to creating a more organized process for distributing funds. The group reviewed a model from Essex Junction that could serve as a framework for Burlington's approach, which would likely need to be adapted to fit Burlington's specific needs. The committee identified three main buckets for regional programs: core responsibilities, regional services, and regional sponsorships, with particular emphasis on how to handle the largest grants over $50,000. The discussion included how to balance transparency with administrative efficiency, and the group agreed to explore inviting organizations receiving significant funding to present their impact data to the committee.
